Beautiful morning weather warmed up throughout the day but didn’t deter the crowd from hanging around to enjoy the water slide and also watch the fun of the Dunking machine which raised over $2600 for the Dolly’s Dream cause, and then enjoy the band that played into the night. Recently, there’s been much discussion about Gillette’s ad and its portrayal of blokes. It’s not a particularly good ad for selling razors, but the intention was to spark debate, and it has certainly succeeded there. Whilst the intention might be admirable, it’s confusing. In particular, polarizing the group it clearly wants to unite for change.

Firstly, some traits targeted in the ad aren’t toxic. A man sees a beautiful woman walking by and works up the courage to introduce himself. He’s restrained by a bystander who says, “Not cool man, not cool”. If we remove confidence from the permitted range of male behaviour, then the world’s in a pretty poor state. This pigeonholes every bloke who ever worked up the courage to introduce himself to a girl, as “toxic”. The debate needs to more strongly acknowledge admirable male behaviour. Stoicism and confidence are traits some feminists deem “toxic”, but they’re traits I wish to see in my kids; male and female.

Secondly, it’s tarred the entire male population with the “Toxic Masculinity” brush. Many guys feel aggrieved by the fact that in the current climate and in this ad, even the “nice blokes” are made to feel guilty. This happens when gender rather than behaviour is the rallying-cry. Boys bullying behaviour is a big part of the ad. Bullying is awful and should be condemned, but it’s behaviour, not gender that needs targeting. In 26 years of teaching, the ratio of girl / boy bullies was 50/50. Boys tended to be more physical, however in my experience, online gossip, texting and cyberbullying shown in the ad were mainly the preserve of girls. Imagine the outcry if an ad targeted girl’s “toxic femininity”.

The 1950’s style game-show / sit-com shots showing overt sexism and leering hosts are an obvious contrast in an otherwise modern, edgy ad. The reason they’re used acknowledges that the audience understands this is behaviour from another time and that society has moved on from this culture. The biggest risk is, if we portray “schmucks” as the majority and infer that this is the prevailing culture, we legitimize their behaviour. Good men doubt themselves and think “Geez are we all like that?” and those who need to change feel absolved because they believe that everyone else behaves the same way!

Navel gazing isn’t bad. Studying yourself with a critical eye encourages self-improvement. In the same vein, the Gillette ad opens with a man looking in the mirror as various headlines; “Me Too Movement; Bullying; Toxic Masculinity” are heard. You might say what’s in a word, but it makes all the difference. Change “toxic masculinity” to “toxic behaviour” and it unites rather than divides. We all agree that some abhorrent behaviours need changing, however blame needs to be apportioned to a minority, not an entire gender.

If the ad is a rallying call to unite, then it shouldn’t alienate those it’s calling to set the bar higher by displaying “The best a man can get”. The admirable traits of masculinity we all strive for, qualities of good character, including discipline, assertiveness, loyalty to a cause, teamwork, protection and care of others, as well as valuing our honourable role as fathers, have been omitted in what is, an overwhelmingly negative portrayal of manhood.

Wide Open Agriculture Ltd (ASX: WOA) (WOA or “the Company”) is pleased to announce it has been granted an Industrial Hemp Licence by the Western Australian Department of Primary Industries and Regional Development, to cultivate and harvest industrial hemp at its pilot shade house site, located near Arthur River in Western Australia.

The R&D Program will measure seed yield, growth rates and root penetration outputs at WOA’s automated shade house and in adjacent open field conditions.

“This information will allow us to pinpoint the industrial hemp varieties that respond best to various growing conditions and will be vital to developing a business case for large-scale production,” Dr Cole said.

Industrial hemp yields a high-protein seed containing omega-3 which can be used in food, non-dairy milk and oil production. Fibre may also be extracted for textiles and building products.

Dr Cole said: “Not only is industrial hemp an exciting crop with great potential for production in the Wheatbelt, it has the capacity to play a role in improving soil health.

“The Wheatbelt has some of the world’s most efficient and innovative broadacre farmers, so there is real opportunity to scale-up if open field trials are successful,” he said.

The licence was granted by the Registrar of the Industrial Hemp Act 2004 and expires on 21 February 2022. The licence is renewable assuming WOA complies with the conditions of the licence and the Industrial Hemp Act 2004. The licence applies to the Wedgecarrup R&D site and requires a minimal licencing payment to the Regulator.

WAGIN VFRS | TRAINING

BY TRAVIS HAMERSLEY

Tuesday night the Wagin VFRS took advantage of the nice weather and ventured out to the Wagin Refuse site to practice and hone their skills with the road crash rescue equipment.

Some of the newer members had their first experience using the hydraulic cutters and spreaders, commonly referred to as “the Jaws of life”. Most commented on how heavy they felt after a short time using them but how quickly they can be used to gain access to the inside of the vehicle.

Brigade members also had a chance to experiment with alternative ways to gain access to door hinges by using battery drills, saws and battery rattle guns. It was great to be able to try these methods out without the added pressure of being at an actual accident scene.

Wagin VFRS is always looking for suitable members to help it protect our community. If you would like to know more about becoming a member or would just like to find out a bit more about our brigade then please seek out any of our members around town.
